Description

American Coffee Machine

The American coffee machine is designed to dispense a larger quantity of coffee than an espresso machine, with each use. For this reason, the water tank is generally larger, with capacities ranging up to a maximum of 5 litres.

In some American coffee machines, there is a water connection, to obtain direct water without constantly filling the tank. The carafes can be made of glass or stainless steel, compatible with food contact, and are included with some models.

How the professional American coffee machine works

Inside the American coffee machine there are two plates that maintain the heat of the coffee for a long time after it has been brewed. Each machine is equipped with one or two tanks or carafes for coffee production.

External switches allow you to adjust the brewing in terms of capacity and heating.

Cleaning the American coffee machine

Cleaning the filter and carafe is essential to maintain the quality of the machine and its accessories for a long time. The carafe or reservoir can be cleaned with non-aggressive kitchen detergent under running water, even if it is stainless steel or glass. To clean the filter, the upper part of the machine can be easily removed and coffee residues removed under running water.
